abrnd Emerging Markets Dividend Active ETF Analyst Report

This ETF offers exposure to emerging markets equities, but takes a slightly different approach than the ultra-popular VWO or EEM. AGEM is a "pure play" emerging markets ETF in that it avoids the quasi-developed markets of South Korea and Taiwan entirely, tilting holdings more heavily towards the BRIC bloc and a handful of frontier economies as well. As such, it can potentially be useful either as an alternative to traditional EM ETFs, or as a means of overweighting this asset class. The country composition should be considered in the contest of an overall portfolio; for example, using AGEM with EFA results in no exposure to South Korea or Taiwan, potentially diminishing the completeness of an international equity portfolio. EEG is more expensive than many emerging markets ETFs, though still reasonable considering the exposure to frontier markets and other exotic economies offered.
