iShares Global 100 ETF

Analyst Report

This ETF offers exposure to the global equity market through the stocks of 100 of the largest companies in the world. But 100 is not truly global in nature; exposure is limited to developed markets, including the U.S., Japan, and Europe. As such, 100 can be a potentially useful tool for investors seeking one stop exposure to the developed global economy, including U.S. stocks and developed markets outside North America. Those considering this fund should take a close look at the exposure breakdown; many of the holdings are U.S. companies, and close to half the total portfolio is American companies. It should also be noted that 100 is almost exclusively large cap stocks; allocations to smaller firms is minimal in this fund. This fund is relatively balanced from a sector perspective, giving investors a sampling of every corner of the developed market economy. 100 is a fine ETF at an appealing price point, but there are alternatives that offer considerably greater depth of holdings, such as ACWI and VT.
