

ACGR

American Century Large Cap Growth ETF

Fund Description

ACGR is an actively managed, non-transparent ETF that selects US large-cap growth stocks based on positive fundamentals and ESG criteria.

FactSet Analyst Report

ACGR uses a multi-factor model that assigns each security in the Russell 1000 Growth Index a financial score and an ESG score. The two scores are combined on an equal weighted basis to create an overall score. The growth and value factors consider company earnings, cash flow and changes in earnings estimates, price-to-earnings, and price-to-cash flow. The model also takes into consideration price momentum. Final scores are evaluated on a sector-specific basis, selecting typically 70-90 large-cap stocks that exhibit the strongest scores in their respective sectors. Unlike traditional ETFs, the fund does not disclose its complete holdings daily, and instead publishes a proxy portfolio on its website. As such, the fund may trade a higher premiums or discounts especially during periods of increased market volatility. Holdings will be disclosed on a quarterly basis, with a 60-day lag. Prior to December 10, 2024, the fund was named American Century Sustainable Growth ETF under ticker ESGY.
