

FFND

One Global ETF

Fund Description

FFND seeks long-term capital growth from an actively managed fund of global stocks that benefit from emerging secular trends driven by technological, social and environmental changes.

FactSet Analyst Report

FFND, Future Funds first ETF, actively selects global securities that are positioned to benefit or derive significant revenue from change-driven secular trends. Although it has a global exposure, the fund will invest predominantly in foreign securities. Using their own proprietary fundamental research, eligible companies are identified as either thematic winners (firms with attractive valuations that benefit from secular trends) or thematic losers (firms with excessive valuation that are negatively affected by secular trends). The fund adviser selects companies classified as thematic winners and may also employ short positions in firms identified as thematic losers (aside from futures and options) for hedging purposes. Although the fund includes firms of all sizes, the resulting portfolio skews toward large- and midcaps. The fund may also have foreign exposure through ADRs. Prior to April 1, 2025, the fund was named The Future Fund Active ETF with exclusive US exposure.
