

GTOH

Invesco Short Duration High Yield ETF

Fund Description

GTOH is an actively managed ETF that broadly invests in high-yield, corporate debt securities of various maturities from around the world. The fund uses derivatives to manage duration and hedge risks.

FactSet Analyst Report

GTOH broadly invests in high-yield fixed income securities, such as corporate bonds and convertibles, rated between B- and BB+. The actively managed fund may invest, without limit, in securities denominated in any currency by issuers from around the world, including emerging markets. Supplemented by top-down analysis of sector and macro-economic trends, the selection process uses a bottom-up evaluation based on fundamental, quantitative, and relative value analyses. Up to 15% of assets may be in illiquid securities. The portfolio is diversified across different industries, capping individual securities by 5%. With full discretion to make investment decisions, the portfolio managers factor in economic and credit-related fundamentals, market supply and demand, market dislocations, and situation-specific opportunities. The funds credit research process may include ESG. Prior to February 23, 2026, the fund was named Invesco High Yield Select ETF, trading under the ticker HIYS.
