

PRFD

PIMCO Preferred and Capital Securities Active ETF

Fund Description

PRFD is actively managed to invest in a broad basket of preferred and capital securities issued by US and foreign companies. Portfolio holdings are of varying credit quality and maturity.

FactSet Analyst Report

PRFD seeks to provide total return by primarily investing in the preferred and capital securities market. Capital securities may include securities issued by global financial institutions. The fund considers issuers of any market cap and may allocate up to 50% of its assets to high-yield securities. It may invest without limit in foreign issuers. A bottom-up approach is utilized to identify undervalued sectors and securities. The resulting portfolio is typically concentrated in banking industries. The fund maintains an average portfolio duration within one year of the portfolio duration of the ICE BofA US All Capital Securities Index. To attain desired exposure, PRFD may use derivatives such as options, futures, and swaps. It may also utilize currency forwards and engage in short selling. The fund has a longer investment horizon, it does not put emphasis on short-term, tactical trading. As such, investments and returns are expected to be different from other funds from the adviser.
