FactSet Analyst Report

The fund is closing. The last day of trading will be July 28, 2022. VSLs index uses statistical analysis of market data to identify US large-cap companies with the highest likelihood of appreciation over the upcoming one-week period and the lowest volatility. The quantitative model measures market sentiment for a company using technical metrics such as the proximity of opening and closing prices to their mean, the frequency of price deviations from the mean, security performance, and volatility. The index selects approximately the 25 top-rated names from an index of the 500 largest US companies. VSL is equal-weighted, and is rebalanced and reconstituted at market open each Wednesday.
